HERE TO SERVE THE MARCH ARB COMMUNITY

Southern California Airshow

Knights,

Welcome to the Southern California Airshow edition of The Beacon. We are honored to host the airshow on April 11 & 12, where we will showcase the power, precision, and unwavering dedication of the United States military and the aviation community.

March Air Reserve Base has stood as a pillar of American airpower for over a century. We will proudly open our gates to share the legacy of excellence that defines our armed forces. This airshow is more than a display of skill and technology—it is a testament to the courage, discipline, and expertise of the men and women who serve our great nation.

Attendees will witness the raw lethality and unmatched capabilities of our military and civilian aviators as they push the limits of flight and demonstrate the might of American airpower. From high-speed military demonstrations to awe-inspiring civilian performances, and from cutting-edge aircraft to interactive ground displays, every aspect of this event reflects our commitment to defending freedom and advancing the frontier of aviation.

Whether you are a lifelong aviation enthusiast, a supporter of our armed forces, or simply want to experience the thrill of flight, I encourage you to invite your family and friends to take it all in. Engage with our community members, share the technology that protects our nation, and let them witness firsthand the dedication that keeps our skies safe.

I thank you for all that you do for our base and our great nation. I hope you have the chance to come out with your loved ones to enjoy the show!

THE LEGACY OF THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AIR SHOW: A TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE AT MARCH AIR RESERVE BASE

BY: MSGT WENDY DAY

MARCH AIR RESERVE BASE, Calif. – The Southern California Air Show has grown into one of the most anticipated and celebrated aviation events in the nation, rooted in decades of tradition at March Air Reserve Base (March ARB). Formerly known as March Field AirFest and Thunder Over the Empire, this event has become a signature display of air power, innovation, and community pride.

Established in 1918 as March Field, March ARB has been at the heart of U.S. military aviation for over a century. From its origins as a World War I pilot training base to its current mission supporting global mobility, combat airlift, and air refueling under Air Force Reserve Command, March ARB remains a symbol of enduring strength. The air show serves as a powerful connection between the base and the Southern California community, offering a rare glimpse into the capabilities and dedication of today's Airmen.

"The Southern California Air Show is not just a demonstration of air power; it's an opportunity to connect with the community and showcase the capabilities of the men and women who serve at March ARB," said Lt. Col. Sean Ferguson, Southern California Air Show director. "This event is a true joint effort, bringing together military and civilian partners to make it a world-class experience."

Executing an event of this magnitude is no small feat. It's a Herculean effort that demands months of planning, coordination, and precision across countless moving parts.

"It takes a massive joint effort to run an air show of this magnitude," said Maj. Perry Covington, 452nd AMW Public Affairs director and ground boss for the event. "From security to logistics, airspace management, and public outreach, every detail is meticulously planned to ensure safety and success."

The 452nd Air Mobility Wing leads the charge, working hand-in-hand with state and local partners to bring the event to life while maintaining focus on mission readiness. Security is a critical piece of the puzzle, involving close collaboration with federal and local agencies including the FBI, Department of Homeland Security, Riverside County Sheriff's Department, and base security forces.

THE LEGACY OF THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AIR SHOW: A TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE AT MARCH AIR RESERVE BASE

“The goal is to provide a safe and enjoyable experience while maintaining a robust security posture,” said Capt. John Medcalf, lead operations coordinator for the air show. “The partnerships we build with law enforcement and emergency response agencies ensure we are ‘Always Ready’ to handle any situation.”

The air show isn’t just about jets and static displays—it’s about people. It’s about the Airmen, the families, the veterans, and the local community that supports this base year after year. From the high-speed maneuvers of the world-renowned United States Air Force Thunderbirds to the immersive ground exhibits, every part of the experience is designed to educate, inspire, and honor those who serve.

“This air show is our way of giving back to the community that supports us year-round,” Ferguson added. “It’s a chance for people to see what we do, meet the Airmen who make it happen, and be inspired by the incredible capabilities of our nation’s military.”

As March ARB carries its rich legacy into the future, the 2025 Southern California Air Show stands as a proud tribute to heritage, excellence, and the power of partnership. With each roar of the engines and each wave from the crowd, the tradition continues—bigger, better, and bolder than ever.

CHIEF'S ON LEADERSHIP

MSGT WENDY DAY

MARCH AIR RESERVE BASE, Calif. – Chief Master Sgt. William Kelly, the senior enlisted leader for the 452nd Mission Support Group, sees his role as more than a position—it's an opportunity to shape the culture, professionalism and operational effectiveness of the entire group. With a distinguished career spanning more than two decades, Kelly's leadership centers on building trust, investing in Airmen and ensuring mission execution with excellence.

As the senior enlisted leader, Kelly is uniquely positioned to influence the development of Airmen across diverse specialties. He prioritizes mentorship and professional development, ensuring enlisted personnel have the guidance and resources necessary to succeed. A key focus of his leadership is empowering Airmen to grow into strong, capable leaders who are ready to guide the next generation.

"Leadership is about building trust, investing in people and ensuring the mission is executed with excellence," Kelly said. "My ultimate goal is to develop Airmen who are ready to lead, support and win in any environment. A strong leader creates other strong leaders, and that's what I strive to achieve every day."

Kelly's commitment to service extends beyond his assigned duties. His deployment in support of Operation Allies Welcome demonstrated his willingness to step outside of his comfort zone and lead by example.

"That mission highlighted the importance of adaptability and teamwork," Kelly said. "It reinforced our commitment to serving and assisting those in need."

Throughout his tenure, Kelly has consistently emphasized readiness, resilience and adaptability. He fosters a culture of open communication, provides honest feedback and instills a sense of discipline, accountability and recognition.

He encourages Airmen to find balance between their military and personal lives, recognizing that overall well-being contributes directly to mission success.

"Our Airmen are our greatest asset," Kelly said. "When we take care of them, they take care of the mission."

Kelly's dedication to shaping the culture of the 452nd Mission Support Group—and his unwavering commitment to developing Airmen—ensures the group remains ready to meet the challenges of today and tomorrow. His servant leadership continues to inspire those he leads.

MONTH OF THE MILITARY CHILD

A LETTER FROM NOELLE

Hi, I'm Noelle, and I want to tell you about my life as a military kid. I started this journey in 2019 when I was just six years old, and my mom went to tech school and boot camp. I was really sad when she left to start her job as an aircraft mechanic, but she called me every day and even threw me a surprise birthday party that I'll never forget.

One day, I was on the phone and walking around my house when I suddenly heard "Surprise!" and saw confetti everywhere. This was just one of the many times my mom made me feel special even when she was away. She also sent me gifts every week, and when she came back, I got to go to lots of cool events.

One of the best parts of my life so far was going to my very first military ball. The event had a '80s theme, and it was so exciting! I also got to go inside of a military aircraft for the first time, which was really thrilling and something that I will always remember.

I have been to many Christmas parties and other fun events too. Being a military kid means I get to have lots of adventures and learn new things. I even get to be known as one of the coolest kids at school, especially on career day.

I am really, really proud of my mom. She isn't just my mom; she's like a superhero who saves lives every day. Her strength, hard work, and dedication inspire me to be brave and do my best. Now, I'm excited because I get to visit her while she goes away for four months for tech school. I'll be with her and learn even more about what makes her so amazing, and we're also going to visit the Lincoln Memorial during that time!

Being a military kid is the best thing in the world, and every challenge and adventure has helped make me who I am today. Catch you later, and keep on smiling!

With love, Noelle

AIR SHOW SECURITY: JOINT FORCES ENSURE SAFETY FOR 2025 SOCAL AIR SHOW

BY: MSGT WENDY DAY

MARCH AIR RESERVE BASE, Calif. – Ensuring the safety of more than 400,000 spectators at the 2025 Southern California Air Show is a top priority for military and civilian agencies. The event, scheduled for April 12-13, 2025, at March Air Reserve Base, represents a full-spectrum joint effort between federal, state, county, and city agencies, working in unison to protect attendees and personnel.

“Every level of law enforcement is in lockstep, ensuring this air show is safe and secure,” said Lt. Col. David Mcmanus, 452nd Security Forces Squadron commander. “The coordination you see happening involves multiple entities—from county and city agencies to federal and military partners—all collaborating to ensure a secure environment.”

The 452nd Air Mobility Wing (AMW), in alignment with Air Force Reserve Command’s priorities, leads security planning under the core principle of being ‘Always Ready.’ Security measures involve a multi-layered defense approach, integrating intelligence, emergency response, and real-time coordination between agencies.

“This air show is a 100% joint effort,” Mcmanus added. “It’s all about getting these agencies into one room, ensuring they collaborate effectively and work together without stepping on each other, while getting everything done that needs to be accomplished.”

Key federal agencies such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the Department of Homeland Security are actively engaged in intelligence sharing and threat assessments. The Riverside County Sheriff’s Emergency Response Team and Moreno Valley Station deputies will provide additional support, reinforcing security protocols in partnership with base law enforcement personnel.

“I venture to say, March Air Reserve Base has the best collaborative relationships with all public safety agencies in and around the installation. This benchmark collaboration has ensured a robust security plan, in line with the principle “Always Ready”. From the ground to the sky, we are watching and ready, to ensure maximum public safety and threat mitigation,” said Master Sgt. Daniel Armstrong, 452nd Security Forces Squadron.

Local law enforcement, including city and county police, fire departments, and emergency medical services, will integrate with military security forces for real-time threat assessment and rapid response capabilities. Surveillance assets, crowd monitoring, and incident response teams will be positioned across the venue to address any potential security concerns swiftly and efficiently. “The goal was to bring military and civilian counterparts together to ensure an integrative security operation.” said MSgt Armstrong.

With a comprehensive and coordinated approach, the 2025 Southern California Air Show demonstrates the power of joint operations. The collective efforts of military and civilian agencies exemplify the highest standards of security readiness, ensuring spectators can focus on the awe-inspiring aerial performances with confidence in their safety.

AIR FORCE RESERVE DELAYED ENTRY TRAINING FLIGHT PREPARES RECRUITS FOR MILITARY LIFE

BY TECH SGT KEKOA SANTIAGO

March Air Reserve Base, Calif. – Each month, the Air Force Reserve’s Delayed Entry Training Flight (DETF) program at March Air Reserve Base welcomes between 60 and 90 recruits, helping them transition from civilian life to military service.

The DETF program, held during the monthly Unit Training Assembly weekends, provides new fully enlisted recruits with lodging, meals, and pay while preparing them for the rigors of Basic Military Training. Over two days, trainees participate in briefings, physical fitness training, and career field discussions to familiarize themselves with the expectations and responsibilities of military service.

Leading the program is Master Sergeant Christopher Moreno, DETF coordinator and group training manager for the 452nd Mission Support Group. His guidance helps ensure recruits receive the preparation necessary for success in their military careers.

MSgt Moreno placed emphasis that the program isn’t supposed to supplement the training provided or for the program coordinators to impersonate the military training instructors at Lackland. “This is simply an introduction of what they should be expecting,” said Moreno. “We don’t have them performing facing movements or marching, but we do have them learning customs and courtesies such as their reporting statement.”

Long Beach native, Jalia Nelson, age 18, said “The program takes away the unexpected,” Nelson, who joined the program in December 2024, is set to depart for BMT at Lackland Air Force Base in April. “We aren’t blindsided compared to people who are in active duty.”

By simulating aspects of BMT, DETF helps recruits build discipline, resilience, and confidence before they arrive at Lackland. The structured environment ensures they have a foundational understanding of military customs, courtesies, and expectations, easing their transition into service.

Devin Edwards, age 19, also from Long Beach, California, joined the program in March 2025 and is scheduled to leave for BMT in May. He plans to become an Aircraft Maintenance Technician. “I wish I had more time in the program because it does prepare you for the real experience,” Edwards said.

The program is a vital resource for the Air Force Reserve, allowing recruits to acclimate to the military lifestyle while maintaining their civilian commitments until their departure for BMT. As March ARB continues to train and develop its future Airmen, the DET flight remains an essential tool in shaping well-prepared recruits ready to serve.

As we continue to get after our annual recruiting goal of 7,600 and attract top talent into the force, we need the internal talent to help make it happen. Here, you will find the released "Recruit the Recruiter" video link on AFRC's YouTube channel and a corresponding QR code, both of which can be used for communicating recruiting opportunities to our internal Citizen Airmen audience of Senior Airman through Tech Sgts.

To maximize audience reach and engagement, this video may benefit from being shown at Commander's Calls and focused events, while following up with any required package information that can be passed along to interested candidates.

Additionally, we have provided a downloadable ad poster to be utilized in communicating opportunities to join our team.
